located and which it will serve; therefore, it is most important that our section of the country, which depends almost entirely upon agriculture—cotton and tobacco heing its chief products—should have a bank, and that all nine of these directors should have a bank, and that all nine of these directors should be men from the territory where the interests are more or less alike. Therefore, if we can locate one of these banks in Richmond, with Virginia and North and South Carolina—and possibly some of the other States—connected, we will have a bank in a South—nected, we will have a bank in a South—nected.

There are many other reasons which will occur to you why we want this pank located in this section of ern territory managed by Southern men acquainted with Southern condi-tions.

will occur to you why we want this bank located in this section of the bank located in this section of the country, but, to my mind, this is the strongost one we can use throughout this and the adjoining States.

I believe the committee will be influenced largely by the desire of the banks, whether they are members of the Reserve Association or not, as the Reserve Association will in the and

Reserve Association will, in the end, serve the whole banking and commer-cial interests of the country through their members; and it is important that these central banks be placed where they can best serve the territory that is assigned to them.

I think that a bank located in Richmond, with Virginians and Carolinians as directors, would be in a much better position to satisfactorily serve this section, and my individual bank and constituents, than if I should be reconstituents, than if I should be required to become a member of a bank located in Philadelphia, where from five to seven of the men who are managing the bank are from manufacturing sections, and have not that sympathy, interest, and knowledge of my section that the board should have.

The natural trend of commerce and trade is towards the great centres of The natural trend of commerce and trade is towards the great centres of the country; therefore, from this section it is always northward and eastward, and for that reason it would be very detrimental to the interests of our three States to have to become members of a Reserve Association lomembers of a Reserve Association lo-cated south of us, say in Atlanta.

We have territory sufficient, within a radius of 500 miles of Richmond, to establish one of these banks as a disestablish one of these banks as a distinctively Southern institution, and I hope you will use your great force and influence to assist us in locating one of these banks in Richmond. Whatever you do should be done immediately, as the matter is to be determined within the next few days. The methods under which you should proceed will suggest themselves to you.
